MASONS INVITED TO VISIT VIRGINIA

Richmond, Oct. 17.- More than 3,000,000 Masons throughout the United States are being extended cordial invitation to visit Virginia from the Masonic temple during the celebration of the George Washington Masonic Bicentennial which will be observed extensively throughout the Old Dominion during the bicentennial observance will take place between February 22, 1952 and December 31, 1952 through August, 1953, the time corresponding to the time in which Washington completed his Masonic degrees.Observances honoring Washington for his accomplishments as a man and a Mason, will include those to be held at Alexandria and Fredericksburg, where he was made a Mason. Other celebrations will be held at Williamsburg, Norfolk and Richmond during this period according to the State Commission on Conservation and Development.

Virginia Masonry named George Washington Masonic Memorial Commission which is now developing plans to focus national attention on Washington during the bicentennial period.

It is believed that many of the ancient lodges in Virginia, some of which were in existence before Washington's initiation, will open their lodge rooms open to visitors during this period. They include the lodge at Yorktown, where Washington and Lafayette visited and their Masonic friends a few days after the surrender of Cornwallis on October 19, 1781.

In Richmond the visitor may see the oldest building in continuous Masonic use in the United States, which is located at 15th and Franklin Streets. In the Alexandria-Washington Lodge No. 22, the original Virginia charter of that lodge may be seen. This interesting document bears the signature of Edmund Randolph, then Governor of Virginia and Grand Master, and it names George Washington as Master.

Local Negro Farmer Youth Tells of Trip to Convention

Extension News: —

Following article is a condensed summary report of Heywood Walker's recent trip to Pine Bluff, Arkansas, as a representing delegate from the State of Virginia 4-H Club. He was one of four 4-H boys chosen throughout the state as outstanding project member. Walker is the second consecutive county winner from Appomattox

The trip to Pine Bluff was made possible, the party consisting of the State Agent, District Agent and Farm Agent; there were 4 boys and 4 boys, each winners in respective areas. The group left Virginia August 20 and returned September 1, 1951.

Heywood states that the trip was a sailing all the way to and destination, without accident of any kind. It was truly the greatest experience thus far in his life. In addition to a hunning busy program were sights, and the program consisted of well known speakers, competitive games, luncheons, group talent programs and group round table discussions of home project activities.

Hours were the things that Heywood most, although enjoyed quite a thrill out of part in a network radio program (Keating Heywood) He announcer's one question was: "Appomattox County is best county in the whole USA."

following is from Heywood's of the extensive tours taken entire delegation:

TON I'N Pine Bluff, Arkansas—Bolt Railroad Shop. The St. southwestern Railroad, better as the "Cotton Belt," has miles of main line. It will celebrate its 75th anniversary next year. 2,100 people work there. It costs about $300 for a overhaul job on an automobile. It costs about $35,000 for a job on a locomotive. It about 30 days to do an overhaul on a locomotive, after each work miles.

Pearson Bow and Arrow Factory—Because one man had a hobby and another man had an oil 25 years later, this factory became the world's largest bow and factory. Ben Pearson, of Pine had a hobby of making good equipment. Carl Haun, an oil man, had the money. had the faith that they could the world on archery. They did, so saw. About 225 people are gaged full time. Over 500 bows nearly 10,000 arrows are made addition to supplying the demands, they supply Australia, England, Africa, Pakistan and America. Bows are made of wood from Cuba and of Hickory from Arkansas, Mississippi and Texas. All arrows are made from close grained white cedar grown Canton.

Pearson Rust Cotton Picker Co.— At the end of this year, 1,000 cotton pickers will have completed, after three years of work. The 400 people employed turning out the machines at the rate of three per day. The two-row self-propelled machines which picks 3 bales per hour, sells for approximately $11,000. Instead of having hands with which to pick, it has 1,200 spindles.

Plant No. II: Little Rock, Ark. Bauxite Dehydrating Plant— This is a small plant that is an area that has been "astrip" mined for aluminum producing bauxite. We saw the ore in its natural state and then after it was processed. The ore is used also in making grindstones, emery wheels, whetrocks, etc. Almost 95 per cent of the aluminum bearing ore in the United States comes from Arkansas.

Municipal Airport:— There were three commercial airlines serving the area, 25 flights were made daily. As we left the airport, we could see MacArthur Park, the birthplace of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Philander Smith College:— This Methodist supported college is in its 84th year, is one of the oldest in the South. Its facilities are estimated as worth more than $1,500,000. About 1,000 students attend here.

State Capitol:— It took 15 years to complete' this building, 1900 to 1915. it looks very much like our nation's capitol. It is built of Arkansas marble at a cost of two and one-half million dollars. It is 267 feet high. The dome is covered with 22 Karat gold. We saw the Governor's reception room, where there portraits of former governors of the state. We also saw the Historical Museum.

Tour No. III - Hot Springs, Ark. —We saw the famous small city of Hot Springs. There were 47 springs from which a million gallons of water flow daily, providing plenty of water for the 19 bath houses operated under the regulations of the U. S. Department of Interior. The temperature of the water averages 145 degrees. The guide told us the story of Ponce de Leon's search for a fountain of youth may have grown from Indian stories about hot springs. We also toured the Fythian bath house and the New Baptist Bath House; our delegation was divided and we observed the general procedure of the patients as they took the special steps on to completion. The treatment takes as much time as three hours or more, depending on the needs of the particular patient. We also visited the original Hot Spring, where we saw the springs in their natural state.

Remmel Dam: It was built in 1924, the state's oldest dam, located on the Ouachita River. Lake Catherine is formed by this dam. It is 65 feet high and 960 feet long. The dam is used to produce electric energy during peak load seasons.

Tour No. 4.— Lion Oil Refinery, El Dorado: It engages in all phases of oil, namely: production, pipe lining, refining and marketing. The company covers 250 acres and produces 22,000 barrels of oil per day. The crude oil is brought to the refinery through 400 miles of underground pipe lines. Almost 2500 people are employe, by this company, with an annual payroll of $10,000,000. We saw some of the very old oil wells that were producing oil.

Heywood Walker states that his trip to the 4-H regional camp was the greatest experience of his lifetime and that he wished he could have shared the trip with his fellow club members. Heywood and the Farm Agent thank those who helped make the trip possible.

Tobacco Sales Feature Fall In Virginia

Richmond, Va., Oct. 17.- Autumn visitors to Virginia will have the added flavor of tobacco to make their tours more enjoyable. For the next several weeks the auctioneers will be deciding the fate of Virginia tobacco farmers in warehouses in Brookneal, Chase City, Clarksville, Danville, Kenbridge, Lawrenceville, Martinsville, Petersburg, Rocky Mount, South Boston, and South Hill, where everyone is welcome. Last year visitors from every state in the union and from many foreign countries flocked to see the show. Auctions are held Monday through Friday.

It Richmond, tobacco manufacturers are opening the great manufacturing concerns to the public and visitors may also see one of the nation's great tobacco research laboratories. During October the windows of Richmond stores will be displaying tobacco and the tools and machinery that go into the production of the more than 107 billion cigarettes manufactured in this, the Tobacco Capital, each year.

Richmond also pays homage to the weed that for more than a century was its currency and source of much of its wealth and continues as one of its principal agricultural and industrial products.

Tourists may also see the farmer attending to his tobacco curing barns as he puts the finishing touches on the production of the crop, particularly in the area south of Richmond and extending west to the mountain area. The big crop is flue cured bright tobacco in what is known as the Old Belt, but tourists visiting Hanover and Caroline counties north of Richmond will find tobacco being sun cured and westward around Lynchburg and Farmville the farmers are preparing the dark-fired tobacco for market. West of the mountains, on the southern end of U. S. Route 11 in Southwestern Virginia, the burley tobacco growers are gathering the weed and motorists will observe their curing stakes where the tobacco leaves are hung to for the curing process in the open air.

But most colorful and enjoyable will be tobacco auction, where farmers gather to sell their crops, collect their money and proceed to the banks to pay their obligations and then on to the retailers to buy necessities and luxuries they have waited for throughout the year.

Tobacco harvest time is a happy time in Virginia, and a gay, colorful pageant of life for the tourist.
